The Russian Czar Assassinated.

The imperial carriage was attacked about 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon on the Ekaterinsky Canal, opposite the imperial stables while the Emperor was returning with the Grand Duke Michael from the Michael Palace in a closed carriage escorted by eight Cossacks. The first bomb fell near the carriage destroying the back part. The Czar and his brother alighted uninjured. The assassin, on being seized by a colonel of police, drew a revolver, but was prevented firing it. The second bomb was then thrown by another person and fell close to the Czar's feet, its explosion shattering both legs. The Czar fell, crying for help. Col. Dorjibky, though himself much injured, raised the Emperor, who was conveyed to the Winter Palace in Col. Dorjibky's sleigh, where, an hour and a half later, he expired. The men who threw the bombs were arrested. Grand Duke Nicholas immediately ascended the throne with the title of Alexander III.

Ed. Register—
Another session of our Public School has just closed, and all the patrons of the school seem to be perfectly satisfied that our teacher, Mr. J. W. Bellevue, has discharged his duty faithfully. This is the third session he has taught at this place. The school closed with an exhibition last Friday night, which was quite a success. The children performed their pieces well. It being the 4th of March, President Hayes (or the Fraudulent President, you may call him) was represented stepping out, and Garfield, President, stepping in, which was very amusing to the audience.

Rev. V. T. Settle and Rev. Mr. Holbrook are holding a series of meetings here, this week. May they accomplish much good.

UNCLE ISAAC.

From Bellevue.

Bellevue, Mo., March 7th, 1881.

Ed. Register—
This place seems to be prolific in correspondents, if each nom de plume is to be counted as one. But I have a suspicion that, like the buccanniers in the olden time, the same craft used many colors, according to the particular piece of devilment they were contemplating. However this may be, I make my bow to you, Mighty Editor, and to your good readers, with all the temerity of a "Freshman," and relying upon your benevolent protection against the "hazing" ordeal, I will "speak my little piece," and ask you to drop the curtain just where you think I should be cut off.

Your correspondent, "Plus," lately remarked: "Health is generally good, except the matrimonial epidemic, which occasionally proves fatal." I suppose a professional man would say: "That which is epidemic is contagious"—and so it seems; for people who venture in the infected matrimonial atmosphere are constantly being caught by Cupid's darts.

To show how true this is, your correspondent wishes to say that one day last week he was most agreeably alarmed by receiving a very elegantly worded invitation to witness the nuptials of one of Bellevue's fairest and sweetest accomplished daughters. The event and personages may be thus summarized:

MARRIAGE—On March 24, at the residence of the bride's father, Capt. Eidson, by the Rev. Dr. Miller, Miss Emma A. Eidson to A. H. Mitchell, Esq.—both of Bellevue.

As Capt. Eidson is known far and wide, the event is deserving of more than the mere announcement.

Your correspondent reached the elegant residence of Capt. Eidson rather late, but in time to greet a number of the waiting guests in the hall; then he paid his respects to the Captain and his good wife in the family sitting room, where he was received with that cordial hospitality for which Capt. Eidson and his lady are proverbial. Scarcely had greetings ended when the approach of the bridal party drew the grand stairway was announced, and guests moved promptly into the parlor, where Dr. Miller, that most graceful and accomplished matrimonial knot-tyer, stood ready, by a legal magical wand, to do that enigmatical thing no sane mortal ever can understand—make two into one. But the Doctor did it. The bride and groom and attendants moved gracefully to the positions assigned them, and a few short sentences sufficed to accomplish the mathematical impossibility.

Two hearts beat as one before: Henceforth each to love and each adore! As thus grouped, the company—consisting of forty-five guests—was perhaps the most brilliant one ever assembled in Bellevue; and it seemed to me there was just the least embarrassment exhibited by the young folks who were then the focus of all eyes. I said young folks, for the fair bride has seen but seventeen summers, and the groom but twenty-four, though the latter of younger appearance.

If I were an artist I would paint you the scene. As I am only a common mortal, I can only tell you in dry and unglittered English that the bride's dress was princess style, of cream-lace hunting, trimmed with satin a shade darker; two front panniers, all satin, trimmed with silk lace of same shade; waist, with a shirry front, of satin; wreath of orange blossoms; eight-buttoned cream-colored gloves, and clippers of same color. Mitchell's dress was—well, it was just what a brave man leading a beautiful woman to the altar should wear.

The ceremony over, and congratulations duly offered, the host and hostess led the way to the dining room, and, behold! what a sight was before us. Garlands and gay decorations around the sumptuous banquet hall, and a table filled with richly and artistically arranged chins; and loaded with every delicacy that taste or heart could wish—nothing could surpass it for beauty, for elegance or sumptuousness.

Everything passed off most pleasantly, and the company deserves the highest praise for its elegant deportment.

Of course there was not room for all the forty-three guests to partake at once, and I have no doubt but at least one of the gentlemen who, during that hour of intense suspense, occasionally peeped through the crack in the dining-room door, while the pangs of an empty stomach were gnawing vigorously, was forcibly reminded of the time when a hungry candidate came around last summer electioneering and ate up all his rabbit soup, and the gentleman aforesaid went to bed hungry and—grunting.

When your correspondent, "Plus," lately said that Capt. Eidson intended removing from Bellevue and leaving one of his pickets to "Allie" on the old homestead, my curiosity was excited to know what was concealed behind the intimation; but the event just chronicled explains the secret which you then correspondent seems to have been possessed of.

I regret to lose Capt. Eidson and family as neighbors, who will soon remove back to Iron Mountain. I should mention, by the way, that Mr. John McKinney and his three-weeks' bride were on hand at the wedding—he as smiling and she as charmingly beautiful as ever.

With most kindly, delightful and charming congratulations and good wishes to the newly-wedded pair, allow your young correspondent to again retire into the shade from which he, for the moment, ventured to expose his existence.

ONE OF THE PARTY.

The Duke of Sutherland and Lord Stafford are expected to leave England on their American tour the first week in April. They will return in August.

The preparations now being made for emigration to the United States in various villages and provincial districts of Germany indicates that the influx to our shores in the next twelve months may be greater than even of that last year.

The driving storms of a month ago in Nebraska drifted thousands of cattle from the ranges north and west down the Platte valley, and much damage has been done by the half-famished animals eating up hay and fields of corn stalks. Barbed wire fences offered little obstruction to the hungry brutes. The number of cattle upon the valley is estimated at 15,000 and 20,000 head, scattered from Cozad to Kearney. Owing to the extreme cold it was impossible for a man to remain long out of doors, and for several days the animals had their own way. Farmers and small cattle owners are indignant that the feed they had provided against bad weather should be devoured by the raiding herds from the ranges. The majority of the large stockmen have expressed a willingness to pay for the damage.

Many persons will take no medicine until "rattened on a bed of sickness. This is folly. Nature always calls for assistance when needed to throw off impurities. With our habits of life, it is necessary to render this help. PARKER'S AIN BIRTERS will not force nature, but acts mildly and renders the assistance required. Try them.
